Dear Sir/Madam,

I'm sorry, I don't understand. How could you possibly produce a GenCost report when you haven't costed large scale nuclear power nor without a recent and accurate costing of SMRs?

Clearly that report has been written to justify the Federal Government's existing energy policy of only using renewables and not even considering nuclear. I get that the CSIRO is not going to bite the hand that feeds it, but if the GenCost report is going to have any credibility, then it should consider all forms of energy generation including nuclear.

I look forward to a balanced and comprehensive GenCost report.

Yours sincerely,

Mark Johnson
